THE IMPORTANCE OF INTRODUCING UZBEK NATIONAL CULTURE TO OTHER NATIONS IN TRANSLATION OF LITERARY WORKS

Abstract. The article discusses about the importance and factors of introducing Uzbek culture to the world. Some national peculiarities and translation methods have been investigated.

Key words: Tourism, nationality, culture, diplomatic relations, national color, realities, translation methods, "Bygone Days" by Abdulla Kadyri

Since independence, Uzbekistan has had countless positive diplomatic achievements with countries around the world. One of the major steps taken in this area is the development in the field of international tourism. Especially in recent years, the increase in the number of guests coming to our country from all over the world is the result of tireless efforts. One of our goals to be fulfilled in the future is to be able to show the centuries-old culture of our people with all its beauty and to provide foreign tourists with the best possible facilities and services in order to further develop tourism.

As in every nation, the Uzbek people have their lifestyle, national holidays and ceremonies, realities and moral relations that have been formed over the centuries. These are called national colors and are reflected in people's conversations, songs, art and literature. If these national peculiarities are not explained in detail to foreign tourists, they may experience culture shock and, as a result, will not enjoy their trip.

In order to prevent such problems, special training should be given to tourism specialists and guides in Uzbekistan and they should be fully taught the history and culture of our people. Also, dictionaries of realities should be published and every tourist visiting our country should be provided with such dictionaries. Because realities - "tandir", "tancha" are only the names of items that exist in the life of our people, and not knowing them causes serious problems for foreign guests.

Recent years, advances in the translation studies has introduced some national peculiarities of the Uzbek people. In the works of Uzbek literature such as "Bygone Days", "Scorpion from Altar" by Abdulla Kadyri, "Between two doors" by Utkir Khoshimov, "Sacred Blood" by Oybek, "The night and the day" from Chulpon , the lifestyle of the nation, traditions, customs, values, social relations, dreams and feelings of the country are vividly and clearly shown. From the works cited above, "Bygone days" and "Scorpion from Altar" have been translated into English and has found their readers.

"Bygone Days" is an exquisite literary masterpiece that delves into the intricacies of human existence, capturing the essence of nostalgia, love, and the passage of time. Through his evocative storytelling, Kadyri takes readers on a poignant journey that transcends boundaries of culture and time, touching the deepest corners of our hearts. In "Bygone Days", Kadyri's lyrical prose weaves together tales of personal reflection, historical events, and the enchanting that delves into the intricacies of human existence, capturing the essence of nostalgia, love, and the passage of time. prose weaves together tales of personal reflection, historical events, and the enchanting beauty of Uzbekistan. His words paint vivid portraits of characters, landscapes, and emotions, creating a tapestry of memories that resonate long after the book is closed. Kadyri's writing is a testament to his mastery of language, as he effortlessly blends poetic descriptions with poignant insights into the human condition.

The novel was first translated directly from Uzbek into English by mark Edward Reese, a well-known American translator and researcher, and was published as a book in the United States. To translate this work into his native language, the translator lived in Uzbekistan for some time, communicated with Uzbeks, learned customs and lifestyle. As a result, he expressed the vividness and impressiveness of the events presented in the novel in English. The translation was recognized by experts and readers.

Translation methods such as transcription, transliteration, calking, pictorial translation, approximate translation can be used to create such dictionaries. It is only important to know how to interpret the name of an object, place or person.

We hope that the tourism industry in our country will be more developed if the above measures are implemented effectively in public places such as hotels, restaurants, and markets in tourist areas. After all, tourism is one of the main factors that serve as a bridge of friendship in diplomatic relations between countries.
